Founded by Julius Rosenwald in 1933, the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago occupies the reconstructed Fine Arts Building of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, considered one of the finest examples of classic architecture in the world. With a total floor area of 14 acres it houses hundreds of operating, dynamic exhibits devoted to telling how American industry, aided by scientific research has helped provide the world with the fullest life in recorded history.

Among its popular exhibits are a full-sized coal mine, a gray iron foundry, the only Nickelodeon left in the country, a full-size replica of a midwestern farm and a Chicago street of 1910.

The Museum and Santa Fe railroad exhibit has 1,000 feet of track and miniature passenger and freight trains in constant operations.
