NAVAJO PONIES

Almost from birth the Navajos take to their ponies on which they roam the vast Navajo Reservation—one of the largest Indian reservations in the United States.

At quaint trackside towns, and as the train speeds through Western New Mexico and Arizona, adjacent to the Navajo Reservation, it is not uncommon to see the Navajos with their ponies.

The Navajo Reservation is one of the many Indian reservations that is of interest to vacationists that travel throughout the colorful southwest territory served by the Santa Fe Railway.

Navajo Ponies, reproduced on the cover of this menu, is from a painting by Gerard C. Delano.
